Who we are

Cuento de Luz is an independent publishing house specializing in children's literature. Its illustrated picture books inspire readers by promoting universal values, demonstrating the highest environmental commitment, and projecting an education for peace. Since its founding in 2010, Cuento de Luz reflects its essence in respect for nature and a firm belief in sustainability, which it achieves through eco-publishing. For the printing of its books, it uses what is known as "stone paper," a mineral paper derived from limestone, the most abundant material on planet Earth. Its composition gives it extraordinary characteristics such as waterproofness, but, most importantly, it does not involve the felling of trees, requires no water, and does not require the use of chemical products such as chlorine.

It also represents an energy saving of more than 50%. It proudly bears the BCorp distinction, a prestigious certification awarded to companies that operate with high social, environmental, and transparency standards. BCorp companies stand out for being innovative and for demonstrating that it is possible to achieve a triple positive impact at the economic, social, and environmental levels. Cuento de Luz has received numerous awards in the United States, among them the one granted by the newspaper The New York Times and the New York Public Library to Ayobami and the Names of the Animals as Best Illustrated Book of 2018.

PUBLISHING PHILOSOPHY

Each title has the purpose of being the light that illuminates the path of its readers and allows them to navigate with imagination, bringing them closer, at the same time, to concepts as fundamental as peace and diversity, or empathy and solidarity. Some of them donate their proceeds to foundations whose projects contribute to causes as fundamental as schooling, child nutrition, or the environment. Through its books, Cuento de Luz wishes to inspire boys and girls to build a better future. All illustrated picture books are available in English and Spanish.
